Environmental Management (EM) Survey/Questionnaire (2018)

Introduction: Please enter your responses to the questions after reviewing the various missions of the Department of Energy's Environmental Management (EM) at the Nevada National Security Site (NNSS), formerly known as the Nevada Test Site. Provide your response back to the volunteer interviewer. The questionnaire will be used to improve community outreach activities.

EM Mission: For almost 30 years, the Department of Energy has been identifying and addressing areas impacted by historical nuclear research, development, and testing at the Nevada National Security Site.

- Industrial facilities – inactive facilities on the NNSS that are contaminated as a result of activities conducted in support of nuclear testing. Of the 1,970 contaminated facilities, all but 12 have been formally remediated and obtained State of Nevada closure approval.
- Soil contamination – surface and shallow subsurface soils were contaminated by historical testing activities on the NNSS and adjacent U.S. Air Force land. Of the 148 contaminated locations, all but 9 have been formally remediated and obtained State of Nevada closure approval.
- Groundwater – study groundwater and conduct analysis at the Nevada National Security Site in order to understand the effects of historic underground nuclear testing. Current research shows contaminated groundwater will not reach public water supplies. The public water supply is safe from the impacts of historic underground nuclear testing.
- Radioactive waste transportation and disposal - The low-level radioactive waste disposed at the NNSS is generated by cleanup activities at the NNSS and other U.S. Department of Energy and U.S. Department of Defense sites across the country. Examples of this waste include contaminated construction debris, scrap metal, soil, and equipment. Some of this waste includes hazardous materials. Waste is systematically disposed in engineered cells excavated to various depths. Continuous monitoring of air, groundwater, and soil is performed.

For additional information on EM activities at the NNSS, please visit the website at <http://www.nnss.gov/pages/programs/em/Environmental.html>

1	Historically yes	6/27/2018 3:32 PM
2	I'm aware that it used to be the NV test site and also that tours are given to the public. Since the tours are book far in advance I'm looking forward to the 2019 schedule.	6/24/2018 7:07 PM
3	i was aware of the testing and the fact that Nevada did not want the site. Also i heard that we were supposed to work on extracting some of the radium out for reuse which was never done	6/23/2018 10:57 AM
4	Historic, yes. Contemporary, no.	6/19/2018 12:45 PM
5	I was a member of the SSAB for 2 years and am quite familiar with NNSS contamination.	6/19/2018 11:45 AM
6	No	6/19/2018 12:35 AM
7	yes, above and under ground nuclear testing, storage and transportation of low/mid level waste	6/18/2018 8:13 PM
8	yes, and they continue to bury very dangerous stuff, and that's why we need Yucca Mtn.	6/18/2018 7:52 PM
9	No	6/18/2018 7:36 PM
10	Some of these activities	6/18/2018 6:53 PM
11	No	6/18/2018 2:46 PM
12	Originally a nuclear test site....all nuclear testing ended in 1992. In 2010 the same changed. . .now nuclear weapons science, security programs, emergency response and training, environmental management and nuclear waste storage.	6/18/2018 10:32 AM
13	Somewhat	6/18/2018 10:03 AM
14	Based on above written information and a bus tour to Yucca Mountain about eight years ago	6/13/2018 12:41 PM

26	Only some of the historic use.	5/21/2018 9:38 AM
27	Yes. And I don't care if you think contaminating our aquifer doesn't affect human water supply. It affects water. Get over yourselves if you think the environment doesn't matter.	5/21/2018 7:11 AM
28	Yes, more or less.	5/20/2018 9:05 PM
29	Yes. I have friends that worked there.	5/20/2018 7:43 AM

30	Mostly historic atomic testing no current things.	5/19/2018 12:47 PM
31	Only that nuclear testing took place there in the past.	5/19/2018 12:39 PM
32	Yes, live in Beatty	5/18/2018 8:14 PM
33	The testing done during the war was a critical task. Today non-nuclear testing and first responder training is done at the site.	5/14/2018 4:05 PM
34	Not fully	5/13/2018 4:35 PM
35	Historic yes, contemporary no. Discovery Channel documentaries and one personal experience took care of the historical part. In the early 1960s we had just parked in the Sahara Hotel parking structure and even though the engine was off, the vehicle began shaking just for a short time. We assumed it was an earthquake or aftershock learning later there had been a nuclear test about that same time.	5/3/2018 8:02 AM
36	No, just some of the historic activities.	5/1/2018 10:16 AM

91	It seems those who do not seek out information concerning the EM program and the NNSS hear or read nothing about these issues. The public needs to become knowledgeable on these issues. Best portrayed through newspapers, public meetings, etc.	3/16/2018 9:56 AM
92	I am a supporter of storing nuclear waste at Yucca Mountain. I'd recommend the NNSS provide examples to the Nevada public of other states "coming to bat" over the years regarding the storage of hazardous materials. For example, Toelle, (spelling?) Utah, Pine Bluff, Arkansas and a couple of other locations that have stored chemical and/or biological materials since WWII. Explain how technology developed after the storage started, allowing for many of these stored materials to be neutralized and are no longer a threat to the environment and people. Provide details of science research getting to the point that within a generation or two, the Nevada stored materials will be neutralized. There shouldn't be an overreaching concern of groundwater contamination in 10,000 years when the material will most likely no longer be a threat in a hundred years or so. Also, the public can be given an unclassified review of the current storage and handling of these materials. How these materials are scattered around the country in "X" number of locations. Explain the benefits of storing the material in one location (Nevada), where in my opinion, the monitoring and security will be much more effective. NNSS can promote this information to the Nevada public through annual seminars held around the state. Additionally, NNSS and Nevada state government, can provide research grants to both UNLV, UNR to conduct research into safely neutralizing radioactive material. I believe Europe, in particular France, has a jump on this research. The funding for this research can come from annual "storage" fees paid by the companies who have sent material to Yucca Mountain for storage. On one hand, I don't care for this material to be stored in "my back yard." On the other hand, to continue to allow all this material to be scattered around our country in a "willy nilly" fashion is downright frightening. Like other states have done before us since WWII, Nevada's turn at bat has come up.	3/14/2018 9:13 AM

94	An informed citizen can offer informed decisions, I am not an informed citizen. I will begin immediately to learn as much as possible because I am a new resident with a family. I asked my realtor if I should get a radon test, she said "oh no, no one gets one here". When I asked her about the nearest radon tester that I learned was offered free, her response was "oh, you won't need one of those here".	3/5/2018 11:23 AM
95	My website padrak.com/vesperman links to two books I have written about radioactivity neutralization methods. The two books total 350 pages. My exhibit "Gallery of Clean Energy Inventions" includes profiles of 27 Radioactivity Neutralization Methods. Same website. The exhibit should be hosted in a public building in Nevada. It takes up 20 meters of walls.	3/1/2018 2:55 PM
